AN INDEX TO THE JOURNAL OF APPLIED COMMUNICATION RESEARCH, VOLUMES ONE TO TWELVE

KENNETH N. CISSNA AND KATHLEEN DAVIS STURGIS

The articles appearing in the Journal of Applied Communication Research during the preceding twelve years (Winter-Spring, 1973, through Fall, 1984) have been indexed by authors' names and by subject categories. Within the AUTHOR INDEX, thematic book and journal reviews have been included as whole units (though not by individual reviews) for assistance in locating materials on a particular subject. The SUBJECT INDEX is comprised of three types of subject terms, reflecting (a) the communication process, event, or variable under study, (b) the applied communication context of the research, and (c) the methodology employed in the study. Not all articles have an entry within all three categories. Methodology, in particular, was used only where this seemed to be a particularly important attribute of the study. Subject terms were usually derived from the title, abstract, or text of the article; occasionally in the interests of parsimony and to reflect current research trends, we have employed subject terms not utilized by the authors.
